

HIST 2349:
Latina/o Jewish History
Dr. Mark Allan Goldberg
Tuesday & Thursday, 2:30–4
Section 21902
Fall 2024

Havener Lebn, ca. 1933

Yiddish newspaper, Havana, Cuba

Cover features Cuban leader José Martí

L: "Center of the Town of Belmonte—A Center for Crypto-Judaism—Apr 2011" by Ken & Nyetta, licensed under CC BY 2.0

R: Jewish Herald Voice, Houston, Feb. 7, 1985

Salomon Imiak, Congressman Mickey Leland and Abraham Imiak greet Chaya Kuperman, president of the Lone Star Chapter of ORT. □

This course explores the history of understudied communities of Jewish Latinxs, linking U.S. and Latin American history. Students will examine questions about diaspora, immigration, and identity in the United States and about race, ethnicity, and how we think about American history. In addition, students will analyze Latinx Jewish experiences through popular culture, such as music, food, and art.

This is a public history course, and students will participate in a digital archive project, documenting local Latinx Jewish histories. In addition to preserving often-unseen stories, these archive-building skills will be useful in any career in history and beyond. By engaging with the Houston Jewish Latinx community through this project, we will study how the past continues to matter to minority communities, whose histories have remained largely overshadowed in society.

This course counts towards

- Language, Philosophy, Culture Core
- Mexican American Studies
- Jewish Studies